

How different age groups are using the internet

With the growth of social media networks such as Facebook and Twitter, traditional blogging has been usurped by micro-blogging quick and short 140 character updates instead of lengthy, in-depth (and sometimes still equally pointless) articles.

However, while teens and young adults seem to be shunning blogging, it is still strong among the over 30s....

